NATIONAL VOTER REGISTRATION DAY
2020 Final Report
National Voter Registration Day is a nonpartisan civic holiday that celebrates our democracy and involves the collective efforts of thousands of volunteers, nonprofit organizations, businesses, schools, libraries and election officials from all over the country.

In 2020, National Voter Registration Day broke new ground, registering over 1.5 million voters and paving the way for historic turnout in the November 3 election. This report celebrates the achievements of our nationwide coalition of partners, who collectively helped a record-setting number of voters gain a voice in our democracy on this year’s holiday.

Held during uniquely challenging times, including a global pandemic and national movements for racial justice, National Voter Registration Day in 2020 was powered by a coalition of nearly 5,000 partners of all stripes and sizes across the country. Election offices, nonprofits, companies and brands, digital platforms, libraries, campus and youth groups, and more were out in their communities this September 22—either through safe in-person events or virtual ones—to reaffirm that every voice matters, and every vote matters, and the COVID-19 pandemic would not stop their determination to keep our democracy strong.
How COVID-19 changed the landscape

National Voter Registration Day’s work was more urgent than ever this year. COVID-19 caused new voter registrations across the country to drop dramatically, as DMVs shuttered and in-person field programs were put on hold.

An estimated 2 million new voter registrations per month were lost during the early days of the pandemic.

National Voter Registration Day partners rose to the challenge, masking up for safe in-person events and also pivoting to virtual registration drives. Election offices forged on with community outreach and voter registration efforts. Nonprofits incorporated voter registration into services they were providing to the community in places like food pantries and health clinics. Essential businesses such as grocery co-ops, pharmacies, and banks also held storefront voter registration drives on the holiday. Thanks to in-kind donations from Patagonia, New Balance, and Doing Good Works, National Voter Registration Day distributed 38,000 facemasks to partners to support safe in-person voter registration events.

Many groups held creative and engaging online events, such as Zoom trivia nights or dance parties, and others designed COVID-conscious events such as drive-through registrations, drive-in movie screenings, or displaying voter registration websites and QR codes on murals and posters. Digital platforms and media partners flooded the internet and airways to shine a spotlight on the urgency of getting registered ahead of state deadlines for this crucial election.

At the core of National Voter Registration Day’s success this year were the holiday’s record-setting number of 107 Premier Partners. These national groups engaged their affiliates and chapters, registered voters directly, and/or promoted the holiday online and in the media.

Nearly half of this year’s Premier Partners were joining the effort as official partners for the first time.
Beyond registering large numbers of voters, National Voter Registration Day also seeks to build a diverse and representative electorate, and to bring new and under-represented voices into the fold. Outreach leads conducted national recruitment drives to ensure the participation of hard-to-reach and underrepresented communities in this year’s holiday.

State Captains received support from National Voter Registration Day to lead on-the-ground organizing efforts in their states, providing training and assistance to hundreds of groups as they prepared to register voters on September 22 and beyond.
A record-setting number of community partners joined in this year’s National Voter Registration Day, including nonprofits, local election offices, libraries, campus and youth groups, businesses, co-ops, and more.

National Voter Registration Day’s press release was picked up by major outlets with a potential audience of over 1 million. We saw pieces in Newsweek, ET, Business Insider, The Root, The Hill, Daily Kos, Forbes, and went on Facebook Live with CNN.

The coverage told the story of how very different messengers—social media platforms, companies and brands, nonprofits, and artists/influencers alike—had the same core message of the need to get registered and ready to vote. Media coverage lifted up how they were innovating and persisting to keep our democracy going strong despite the challenging environment.
Getting registered is the first step in helping more Americans participate in our democracy, but it’s far from the last one. To help convert newly-registered individuals into new voters, this year’s National Voter Registration Day effort placed a renewed emphasis on helping communities get #VoteReady.

Partner toolkits and new resources included guidance on how to request a mail-in ballot, make a plan to vote, and activate friends and family to participate as well. The holiday also partnered with two complementary efforts, the inaugural National Voter Education Week (October 5-9) and Vote Early Day (October 24) to help thousands of National Voter Registration Day partners build upon the momentum generated by their registration events and stay civically engaged ahead of Election Day.
